

NY/NJ AETC Disclaimer

Physicians and other health care professionals are encouraged to consult other sources and confirm the information contained in this site because no single reference or service can take the place of medical training, education, and experience. Consumers are cautioned that this site is not intended to provide medical advice about any specific medical condition they may have or treatment they may need, and they are encouraged to call or see their physician or other health care provider promptly with any health related questions they may have.

Materials Usage Guidelines

Web sites like the NY/NJ AETC rely on the honor system for attribution of authorship. In response to questions from AETC faculty and staff, we have developed the following guidelines.

- Slide sets and other materials that appear on the NY/NJ AETC site are intended for public use, unless otherwise noted.
- If a slide set or other materials are used/presented in their entirety, the author attribution should be used.
- If selected slides or resources from the NY/NJ AETC site are incorporated into another public presentation, it is good practice to credit the author and/or source of the slides/materials selected.
- An appropriate reference citation should be included if materials found on this website are used in preparing other presentations/materials.
- Materials should not be published or posted online without permission from their creators or copyright holders.

Copyright 2009, the New York/ New Jersey AIDS Education & Training Centers, unless otherwise noted. All rights reserved. Email nynjaetc@columbia.edu with questions, comments, or problems.